

Mother Goose House

Mother Goose House

- The rather unremarkable town of Hazard, Kentucky can nevertheless boast one of the most interesting homes in America: in the Mother Goose House but basically on a whim in the second half of the 1930s, the house features a goose head on its roof, but also has three bedrooms, a living room, a kitchen, a bath, dining room, and large family room underneath.
- Over the years, it was home to many owners, a store for many years under the name “The Mother Goose Market” and a gas station.
- From the late 1980s to the present day, Mother Goose House has undergone many renovations due to water leaks .